In former days there have dined in this very hall gartered knights and courtly dames, attended by ushers, sewers, and seneschals, and yet it was but last night an owl flew hither, and mistook it for a barn. (He then describes the ups and downs of the hall and the contents of the great parlour, viz. the broken-bellied virginal, the crippled velvet chairs, the mildewed portraits, and the dried poppies and mustard seed. Then we read of the pigeon-house, and the entry by the side of it, leading you to the two chambers; the buttery, the chaplain s study, the brewhouse, the little...
