THE HONOUR DECLINED. A PASSAGE SECURED. Fob official purposes Colonel Sucre had brought me by a circuitous route, and thus I had the advantage to traverse an extended range of country. However, we embarked at Barancas in a neat schooner, and found on board two young married women of respectable condition, and other persons, whose lively conversation beguiled this otherwise tedious passage. In ascending the river, the dangers to its navigation were numerous; it was consequently the custom to seek out at evening a secure spot, and there make fast the vessel for the night, most generally by passing hawsers round some gigantic tree. Such was the case on our first day s embarkation; and as the cabin was intolerable, owing to the flights of mosquitoes which infested it (and those of the VITAL FRUIT. 127 Orinoco are unusually famed for the length of their fangs, and the venom of their sting), I determined to pass the night on deck, and for my couch selected a hen-coop. I needed no covering, merely putting a handkerchief over my face, and thrusting my hands into...
