Excerpt: . . . THE BIBLE DEFENDER. SECULAEISM AND THE SHOP. These was a timo when Secularists boastly loudly both of their numbers and their unity. The boast, always bootless, is especially so at present. Without principles, and without heart, they are a rope of sand. Startled into a little galvanized activity by a deadly and indiscriminating hatred to Christianity, their positive views, if they have any, are not such as to give them solidity and strength. Secularists are the most impracticable of men. After they have uttered their stale common-places about Christ and his religion, they have nothing to do and they do nothing. The Investigator, their monthly Journal, written as we were somewhere recently told by the aspiring youth of the movement, has been asking the question, What are we doing This is very wise. When people honestly and independently ask that question, there is some...
