Edwin. Do I for the first time behold a parent, . Whom long I ve mourn d, in every silent grove? I do! I do! O exquisite delight! What soft, what sweet effusions do I find Stream thro my bounding heart! What rapt rous joy Now fills my soul, like a deep inundation! That head now cover d with becoming snow, Which many a blast has brav d, so fraught, with knowledge; That heart, which long has fig d i so stor d with wisdom, Shall sow in my young breast the seeds of virtue Shall guide my pliant heart, from all the storms And turbulence of paffions; Make the pow rs The noble inclinations of the soul, Bring forth the genuine fruits of piety, And point my way to happiness, and Heav n Hermit....
